The internet art community known as Do Art Daily has organized a digital publication of the range of presented work on the site. As the name suggests, DAD encourages some sort of fixed drawing regimen to make a habit out of drawing, and in addition to that the community acts as a feedbacker during many different levels of the contributor's artistic development as well as a lively social community with an intrinsic attachment to concept art, video games, books, film and internet memes who hail from similarly various backgrounds. The concept of this magazine is "water", yielding numerous literal (water life), semi-literal (water helmet) and metaphorical (waterbirth) responses to the theme, as well as a few that only do so much as incorporate the name (water music, Tod Dockstader). We hope that the resultant zine acts as a lively collage of the work on the site itself. This zine also represents the newest iteration of topic hell, where all traitors to nation are forced to draw an endless miasma of disparate themes in preparation for work as a concept artist.
